

Ansel Adams

<http://gardenofpraise.com/ibdansel.htm>

When he was a boy, Ansel Adams

his father bought him a $6,000 piano.

Ansel was homeschooled by

as a photographer than as a concert pianist.

His father later hired tutors

his father and his Aunt Mary until he was nine.

When he became interested in music

black and white photography.

His father bought him a

by holding workshops to teach people.

The Exposition was

in art and photography.

At the Exposition he became interested to teach him algebra and Greek.

He took pictures at Yosemite

one-year pass to an Exposition in San Francisco.

He decided he could make a better living

suffered a broken nose in an earthquake.

Ansel Adams specialized in his schooling for one year.

Adams shared his knowledge of photography

the Presidential Medal of Freedom.

President Carter awarded him

with a Kodak Brownie box camera.